

11 Ways Prison Ministry Will Benefit Your Church!

"I never shared my faith with anyone until I got involved in prison ministry." "Prison work taught me the true meaning of forgiveness, grace, and restoration." "My prayer life has a new lease on life due to jail ministry."

These comments from recent prison (or jail) ministry volunteers capture some of the joy and spiritual excitement of this strategically important church ministry. The growth of the local church is built on the personal spiritual growth of its members. Prison ministry offers unique, vital opportunities for personal spiritual growth because volunteers get personally involved, even immersed, in the gospel basics: witnessing, Bible teaching, worship, and encouragement. When church members catch fire for the Lord, it won't be long before the church grows. Let's explore eleven core impacts prison ministry can have on the local church and its members:

1. Prison ministry is America's largest spiritual harvest field. There are more than 2.2 million inmates, many of whom are genuinely seeking change, stability, and love in their lives. Many inmates acknowledge that coming to prison was "the best thing that ever happened to me" because they encountered Christ.

2. Prison ministry does wonders for revitalizing the spiritual lives of volunteers (and subsequently their churches). There's nothing like sharing the gospel to open ears, teaching the Word to thirsty minds, and praying for people with broken hearts to "rev up" one's spiritual life and commitment. In addition, the newfound spiritual enthusiasm of a prison volunteer is infectious, quickly spreading throughout his or her Sunday School class and friendship network.

3. Prison ministry breathes new life into church evangelism and outreach programs. In some cases, pastors and church members have had very few genuine opportunities to share their faith and see God reap the harvest in their churches. In prison ministry, by contrast, spiritually hungry inmates come to the Christian volunteer, often in bountiful numbers as "prison ministry is the most fruitful mission field in our country." – Lenny Spitale, author of the book, Prison Ministry. You will see a harvest of souls for Christ!

4. Prison work can be a real shot in the arm to the Sunday School ministry. Class members can pray for inmates on a personal level, participate in "pen pal" correspondence with recently converted inmates, and pray for and encourage those who actually represent the class "behind the walls." Inmates are invariably deeply moved to know that a whole class is regularly praying for them. (This is the first time many inmates have ever experienced genuine love from anyone.) Some Sunday school classes even "adopt" an inmate's family in their local area, opening up the vital new arena of compassion ministry.

5. Prison ministry enhances worship. Many prison volunteers receive a renewed vision for worship while attending church services behind the walls. Prison worship is never characterized by stale routine or manufactured emotion—inmates definitely see themselves as God's chosen people, not God's frozen people!

6. Prison ministry enhances the church training effort by preparing volunteers to minister to the unique needs of incarcerated Christians. What they learn about sharing their faith, Bible study, and follow-up is equally applicable in "non-prison" ministry. Knowing they will actually utilize these skills upon entering prison makes volunteers attentive and serious learners. A prison chaplain, a veteran volunteer, or prison ministries such as Prison Mission Association, or Prison Fellowship can supply the necessary training.

7. Prison ministry gets church members off the pews and outside church walls. Christians of all backgrounds, education levels, and varieties of spiritual gifts participate in prison/jail ministry. Men and women, young and old, new Christian and "senior saint" all have a place chosen by God to serve. In addition, prison work is never very far away: city and county jails, juvenile detention centers, state and federal prisons, and "halfway houses."

8. Prison ministry teaches deep spiritual lessons, such as how to forgive, how to restore, and how to pray (reminding that God does all the work in prison ministry). It also teaches very practical lessons about listening, patience, cross-cultural communication, and theological diversity among Christians.

9. Prison ministry promotes cooperation and goodwill among diverse Christians from different denominations, socioeconomic backgrounds, and theological points of view. Paul's admonition to keep our eyes upon Christ was never truer than in prison ministry.

10. Prison ministry produces new church members and ministry volunteers. Contrary to the worry of some myopic pastors that prison ministry will "steal away" their volunteers, Christians who become active in the spiritual basics of witnessing, spiritual teaching/counseling, and prayer gain a renewed desire to serve their local churches. Many times it is the pastor or staff member who is most revived by contact or personal involvement with prison ministry. Just listen to the testimony of pastors and lay people actively engaged in prison work—there's always an unmistakable spark of joy and enthusiasm when they share their experiences before the local church.

11. As God raises up godly men and women who feel called of God, we will plant churches in prison. Another campus of your church, which will benefit your church!

Above all else, prison ministry is a shower of blessings for all those involved. You can experience the wonder and joy of leading people to Christ and seeing them start their lives over in ways productive to society and pleasing to God.

You see prayers answered in timely and miraculous ways, strengthening your personal prayer life. You experience complete dependence on God for ministry success after realizing that nothing lasting happens in prison through purely human effort and striving. You come to understand deep down inside the awful nature and consequences of sin and the unique role of Christ in creating new creatures. Prison ministry shows us why indeed we're all brothers and sisters united in Christ.
